Greetings!

Thank you for your interest in Parenting Instructor Network Training (PINT) for teaching the Redirecting Children's Behavior™ Course.

Every parent sooner or later will experience that moment when they feel like crying out for help. Parenting is both rewarding and stressful. And we can all use practical tools for discipline that enhance children's self-image and give the adult more confidence.

Parents are realizing that spanking, yelling, threatening, grounding, taking away toys and privileges and bribing don't work (I know, I have tried them ALL!) but they are struggling with what else TO DO!!

Family schedules are frequently so busy that it feels like an LA traffic jam at best. Parents are grasping for ways to make the little time they have together with their children meaningful.

Here is where you come in. Imagine being the catalyst that positively affects family dynamics ... and getting paid for doing it! There is a growing need for instructors like yourself who enjoy making a noticeable and substantial difference in your community.

Since 1973, the Redirecting Children's Behavior™ parenting course has shown thousands of parents, educators, therapists, health professionals and clergy how to end power struggles and create cooperative, self-reliant and internally motivated children.

Redirecting Children's Behavior™ GETS RESULTS!

What People Say about Redirecting Children's Behavior™

"Redirecting Children's Behavior" is by far the most entertaining and effective parenting program around. If parenting education had a rating scale, "Redirecting Children's Behavior" would get five-stars." ... Tim Seldin, President, The Montessori Foundation

"More than a dozen curricula were reviewed prior to the selection of 'Redirecting Children's Behavior' as the preferred curriculum for PAC Success Academies of Florida. Through nine years of providing services to families, we were required to try other programs. Without exception, we have always come back to RCB." ... Brenda J. Glass, Executive Director PAC Success Academies of Florida

"When I took the "Redirecting Children's Behavior" (RCB) parenting course several years ago, I saw immediate results with my children. It was almost magical how fights and power struggles gave way to cooperation and teamwork. I got way more than my money's worth on the parenting front alone, but as an emergency physician, I've had the added benefit of using RCB principles with children (and sometimes adults!) in the emergency center. It is truly magical to take a hurt, sick, and frightened child and be able to engage them, encourage them, and turn what could be a traumatic experience into an empowering one". ... Lonnie Draper, M.D., Vice President, Emergency Services

Pre-requisites for Instructor Training

What RCB Instructors Say About Teaching

"I love teaching Redirecting Children's Behavior because it has connected me to my deepest passion and has given me a powerful springboard to do what I love most. I love teaching RCB because it is and has been the MOST rewarding, fun, and life-giving adventure of my life." ... Jennifer Williams, Instructor in Livingston, Montana

"I love teaching RCB because of the confidence I have that the understanding and application of the philosophy and specific redirections helps parents to effectively do the difficult job of parenting. As instructors, we help parents nurture their children and give them critical thinking skills and the emotional intelligence they will need to be successful as adults. It truly is about parenting with the long-term results in mind. I know that after taking RCB, parents feel more confident and embrace their parental responsibility with more joy. RCB is based in sound developmental and psychological theory." ... Delene Cole, Instructor in Plantation, Florida

"When teaching RCB, I know that I am helping people gain insights and develop skills that will assist them in every sphere of their lives: to communicate with clarity, honesty and courage, to manage conflict creatively, to treat others with empathy and understanding. Every time I teach RCB I learn these things again for myself, and I also learn from those I am teaching. We help each other rise into the role of teaching the next generation how to live well, what is really important, how to respect and care for themselves and others." ... Lois Haultain, Instructor in Sydney, Australia
